

110 Murders In Kansas City So Far!!!

Editor's Note

We're calling this issue of the The TKC E-Zine "REVISTA" because it's a good look at some of the most important cultural and political things that happened this week in Kansas City.

Once again, more than anything else, the murder rate has influenced our local culture and that's what should lead. Our cover features a memorial for Kansas City Area homicides at Wornall Road Baptist Church. It's a stark and haunting reminder of the reality of life on the streets of KC. Still, even in the face of so much despair, this town manages to come together in a variety of interesting ways. There are photos of THAT in here too.

Here's how the week looked to TKC. Forgive the small plug but this idea is something I'd like to continue and expand in the future. Hope you enjoy.

The Influencers

Earlier this week TKC was lucky enough to be invited to speak on a panel for The Kansas City Centurions.

It was quite an honor to be in the company of the most influential people working in local media and politics.

A Day In the Life Bryan Stalder

Here's a glimpse of how Bryan "El Bryan" Stalder formats some of his award winning comics for The Northeast News.

A man with glasses and a black t-shirt is sitting in a black office chair in his home workspace. Behind him is a fireplace with a brick surround. On the mantel, there is a lamp, a small box, and several Christmas cards. Above the mantel is a sign that says "XOREX MAN SHOW AND TELL". To the right, a computer monitor is visible on a desk, displaying a desktop with many icons. A red baton with "LEADERSHIP #1 TEAM" written on it is on a shelf above the monitor. The room has wood-paneled walls and a light fixture above the fireplace.

From his home workspace in Northeast, Stalder is the "graphic artist of record" for an international company and one of Kansas City's most talented satirists.

A yellow, glossy smiley face figurine with a simple, rounded body and thin limbs. It is holding a small, rectangular white sign with both hands. The figurine is positioned against a dark, textured background.
